COVID-19 response coordinator Tom Brown, and Pentagon Veteran, and now privacy expert John Villasenor, have worked together on the Supporting Soldiers, Veterans and Families Act, and the Closing the Border Act. We have been talking about COVID-19 for weeks. As part of our effort to prevent the spread of COVID-19, we've been cleaning our offices, calling in the pros to clean out our home office, cancelling big meetings, and reminding each other to follow the CDC's guidelines for reducing COVID-19. But now we're in a new phase. This is Phase Two of the COVID-19 pandemic, which is Testing. But the testing only works for people who know they're sick and go to the doctor. And until we stop the spread, people who don't know they're sick can't be tested, so the number of COVID-19 cases will continue to grow. That's why Governor Gavin Newsom has announced a COVID-19 testing site. So, on May 4, California will start collecting more than 40 million tests of saliva and nasal swabs. The effort will be overseen by the state's Department of Public Health and run by LabCorp. The results will help California keep track of how well Social Distancing is working. John Villasenor: "Most people will be good because they are See You, Don't Tread on Me." I'm John Villasenor and I'm the Privacy Rights Director of the Center for Democracy & Technology, and this is Restoring The Republic, the Podcast for the Restoring America Initiative. We're delighted to have Tom Brown with us to discuss COVID-19 and Supporting Soldiers, Veterans, and Families. Tom is Director of the Supporting Soldiers, Veterans, and Families Act, and also COVID-19 response coordinator. Tom is a former prison warden. He is now an Inmate Rights Activist. He also works with organizations like Stop the Prisoner Pipeline, Justice Reform Now, and ACLU of San Francisco. He has testified before Congress, briefed the State Department, and met with the FBI and the US Army to discuss the COVID-19 crisis. John: "A lot of people ask me about all the 82157476af
